National Newspaper Week

One Man's Story

Newspapers all over America are celebrating this as National Newspaper Week. And if it serves to draw the public's attention to the fact that a Free Press is part of that trinity of Free Press, Free Public Education and Universal Ballot upon which our American democracy was founded and upon which it must stand today—then National Newspaper Week will have been worth while.

For among the other American fundamentals that have been attacked by this restless and idle generation the Press has been singled out for special criticism.

It never occurs to a conscientious newspaper man to attempt to answer by logic what can be truthfully answered only by example. To argue over the question whether newspapers should be free from governmental interference would be like arguing over the question whether small children should be taught to read and write—or whether their fathers and mothers should be permitted to vote. We who live in America keep our forefathers' beliefs close to our hearts—either we do that or we are destroyed.

And so logic in a matter like this is reduced to the mere idleness of a cursive argument.

For America, her institutions, her wealth and power, her relative security in a world totally insecure—not to mention the security of her citizens against imprisonment for political beliefs—this America of ours is a fact . . . not a logician's theory.

The other night I finished the story of a man who all his life up to now believed the American way was wrong. The man's name is Jan Valtin, and he wrote that sensational book, "Out of the Night"—the story of a German communist, who, when the young German republic was fighting for its existence, followed out orders from Moscow to destroy the republic—even if doing so required that he temporarily help a fellow named Adolf Hitler.

Jan Valtin's story is perfectly plain. A good Communist believes in joining hands even with known enemies of Communism provided all of them are bent on destroying the government of the land in which they live.

Valtin's superiors in Moscow presumed that in the collapse of the young German republic the Communists, not Hitler, would succeed to power. But they missed their guess. Hitler "took over"—and the Communists in Germany were totally destroyed. Valtin himself languished for years in jail, was horribly beaten . . . eventually escaping to our own America.

Vital to Valtin's story "Out of the Night" are the chapters on the struggle of all factions within Germany for control of the printing press.

Of all those factions, only the Social Democrats, the party of the republic, believed in a free press. The Communists and the Hitlerites, alike, believed in destroying all presses but their own.

Germany's loss of her young republic is one of the world's greatest tragedies—a tragedy that brought Hitler to power, a tragedy that has plunged the world into war.

Only the middle-of-the-road policy of a constitutional republic like our own—and like the one many Germans had hoped to build—could have avoided this tragedy.

But the road to prosperity and security and peace was blocked by violent men—men like Valtin on the Communist side, men like Hitler on the other.

Ironically, this man Valtin who confesses his errors in this autobiography "Out of the Night," is now a fugitive in our own America, fighting deportation to his native Germany.

And, this being America, and Valtin facing certain death from Hitler should he be deported, it is entirely likely we shall let him stay.

From his book I judge he thinks more of America today than ever in his whole life before.

A Successful Man
Meets Death

When a really successful life ends, the sense of completion, fulfillment, dull the edge of grief.

And what is a successful life? Surely it is not always to have made a great deal of money, though that spells success to some. Surely it is not merely to have exercised great power, nor to have attained great fame, though to some those things are success. Often the man who has made the money would give it all for a little fame, and the one who basked in the limelight of the great wishes at the end he had been comfortably obscure.

No, success is perhaps simply to have done what one wanted to do, to have achieved roughly what one wanted to achieve.

Local Prisoners Contracted to Pulaski County

Jail Upkeep Proves Burden to County, Judge Luck Asserts

A contract whereby heavily fined Hempstead county prisoners will be housed in Pulaski county for work was made known Friday by County Judge Fred A. Luck. The contract was signed at Little Rock Thursday.

In commenting on the contract Judge Luck said that Hempstead prisoners bearing heavy fines on various charges had become a burden to the county.

"We have no place to work prisoners," Mr. Luck said "therefore they just have to lay their fines out in jail."

"Jail expense for last month alone was $333 and the county cannot afford this expense," he said.

Under the contract Pulaski county will take prisoners, work them, and feed and clothe them at no expense to Hempstead county. The prisoners will be paid 75 cents per day as provided by law.

Judge Luck was accompanied to Little Rock by Sheriff Clarence E. Baker.

The contract follows:
Whereas, the County of Hempstead, Arkansas, desires to make a contract with some responsible party or parties, for the maintenance, safekeeping and working of County Prisoners committed to the County Jail of said County during the years 1941 and 1942, and

Whereas, Pulaski County by its Judge, C. P. Newton, agrees to lease the prisoners of the aforesaid County for the maintenance, feed and clothing of said prisoners without expense to the lessor, it being understood between the lessor and lessee that lessee is to receive all fines paid for prisoners after they have been leased to lessee and

Whereas, lessor agrees to deliver each prisoner, with commitment showing amount of fine and cost, to the County Jail or County Farm of Pulaski County without cost to the lessee,

Now, therefore, Pulaski County agrees to lease from the County of Hempstead, Arkansas, its County Prisoners during the years 1941 and 1942 and agrees to allow the sum of Seventy-Five (75) cents per day to each prisoner worked, as provided by law, and agrees to maintain said prisoners without cost to the lessor, it being understood between both parties that the lessee is to receive all cash fines or moneys paid for fines and costs while prisoners are in custody of Pulaski County.

It is further agreed and understood that when prisoners are delivered to lessee said lessee shall have full and complete control of said prisoners and shall require and cause said prisoners to labor at reasonable employment until the fine, costs and jail sentence, if any, imposed upon said prisoners by the Court is fully discharged.

It is further agreed by and between the parties of this contract that this contract may be terminated by either

German Submarines, Traveling in 'Wolf Packs', Strike at British Convoys in Dead of Night

Graphic Story Relates Nazis' New Mode of Attack

By PAUL MANNING

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

LONDON — German U-boats attacking in the North Atlantic and off the coast of Africa once again have become a great threat to British shipping due to the new method of attack they now employ, naval circles here say.

The first large scale tryout of this new technique—hunting in "wolf packs" and emerging at night up into the center of a convoy—occurred off the coast of north Portugal recently when a 48-hour running attack by a small armada of U-boats accounted for at least six of the 23 ships in a convoy bound for Gibraltar. A destroyer and a corvette went down, too.

Two seamen from the ill-fated convoy, in describing the running battle which lasted through the night-tides of two consecutive days, told how the jet black hair of one sailor turned dead white in six hours. As they related their story, the hands of the two seamen shook just a little. Not from fright, but from the reaction of reliving the shattering experience of first seeing life and then seeing death to the tune of torpedoes and the cacophony of exploding tankers.

An English seaport had been the jumping-off place for the convoy's not long but highly perilous trip through those mine-dotted and submarine-infested waters which stretch from Land's End to Gibraltar.

There were tankers filled with gasoline. There were bigger ships packed to the gun-wales with shells for the camouflaged guns which jut from every foot of Gibraltar's majestic north face. And there were some, like the one that these two sailors manned, which carried food for the strategic fortress peninsula.

Premonition of Disaster
As the convoy steamed along, it was kept in formation by the few destroyers and corvettes which circled constantly like alert sheep dogs—ready to rush to action at the first sign of attack from below or above.

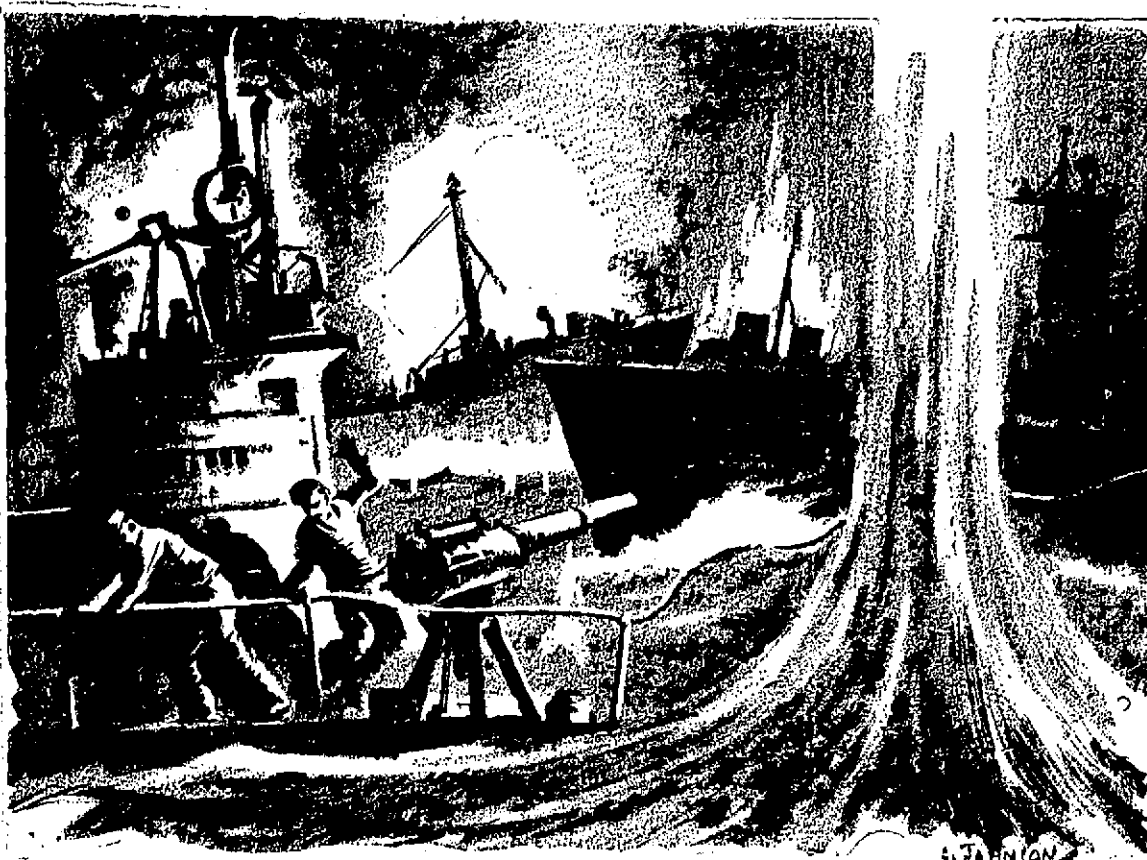

Occasionally airplanes would appear from out of the sun. Then all gun stations would be manned, with no one relaxing until they had been recognized as the Catalina flying boats ordered to keep an eye on this group of ships steaming slowly along at their lumbering eight knots each hour.

Many times, the seamen said, they had the feeling U-boats were trailing and twice the destroyer nearest their ship, which brought up the rear of the convoy, would dart out and away and begin cruising fast in great circles, dropping depth charges for a time until again it would settle tranquilly back into formation.

Under Cover of the Night
During the early hours of the third night a heavy formation of U-boats struck.

The submarine commanders had waited until the mantle of night concealed them from the eyes of those flying boats overhead—then they had moved in for the kill. In a precision formation of their own they had suddenly emerged up into the center of that long convoy which was struggling along in box formation, firing as they broke surface with periscopes.

That's when the night became hell.

The accompanying story by Paul Manning, NEA Service, London correspondent, gives a graphic account of a recent sea battle in which the German navy employed its new and deadly technique of submarine attack.

New Revolts in Europe

More Anti-Nazi Uprisings Draw Strong Reprisals

By the Associated Press
Revolt of Europe's conquered millions erupted in new violence Friday and drew iron-fisted reprisals in many countries.

The quiet of pre-dawn Paris was shattered by explosions wrecking 6 synagogues with two persons injured. Right wing terrorists were blamed.

Berlin reported that the mayor of Prague, Otakar Klatka, had been condemned to death by a German peoples court of charges of plotting rebellion and the government of Nazi dominated Slovakia decreed the death penalty for sabotage.

German firing squads were reported executing again in both Prague and Grno in the Bohemia-Moravia protectorate.

Prague newspapers said 18 were executed Thursday, including 15 shot and three hanged as agents of the German Gestapo pressed a sweeping investigation of rebellion in the protectorate.

Thirteen editors and officers of the former Czech army including three retired generals were among those executed the German radio said following the discovery of a plot for armed uprisings.

London heard that eight persons had been executed in Holland for aiding British fliers and reported that German authorities there had threatened even stricter punishment in the future.

Reduces Colette's Sentence
VICHY—(AP)—Marshall Petain intervened Friday to save the life of Paul Colette under sentence for the attempted assassination of Pierre Laval and Marcel Daut.

The young Norman's sentence was commuted to life imprisonment. Colette, who was sentenced to die by a special French court Wednesday, was saved at the last minute at the urgent request of Laval and Daut themselves.

Bauxite to Get Alumina Plant

Two Plants Previously Suggested Will Be Combined

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Construction of a $15,000,000 aluminum plant in Arkansas instead of 2 smaller plants as previously suggested has been recommended by the Office of Production Management to the War Department, Rep. Norrell (D.-Ark.) said Friday.

This plant is to be built in Saline county, site of bauxite deposits and will have an annual capacity of 10 billion pounds of alumina, the powdered substance from which aluminum, vital in construction of bombers, is made.

The site of the alumina plant which will have an annual capacity of 10 million pounds is not decided on.

Construction of the double capacity alumina plant would involve a saving of $8,000,000 when compared with the cost of 2 smaller plants plus large savings in operating costs, Norrell said.

The Saline county plant will employ about 650-700 in operation and will be located at Bauxite where the land for its construction already has been acquired.

Charges USSR Was Preparing German Attack

Admits Reds Strong, Even as Russia Claims New Successes

By the Associated Press
Adolf Hitler returning to Berlin from the eastern front told the German nation Friday that a "gigantic new development" which began in the last 48 hours in the Russian campaign would smash the opponents in the east—and help to reach victory.

Hitler asserted that Russia was already beaten and charged the U. S. S. R. with preparing to attack Germany if he had not struck first.

He conceded, however, that "we made a mistake about one thing. We did not know how gigantic the preparation of this opponent had been."

With this admission of the ferocity of Soviet resistance Hitler coupled the declaration that a "decision now being fought out is for the next hundred years."

2,500,000 Prisoners
The German leader said Nazi armies had captured about 2,500,000 prisoners, 22,000 guns, 18,000 tanks and about 15,500 Soviet warplanes destroyed.

Even as Hitler spoke, addressing 25,000 cheering Nazis in Berlin, the Russians reported their armies had smashed the Germans back nearly 30 miles in one direction of the Leningrad front, over run Nazi siege trenches around the old Czar capital and inflicted more than 8,700 casualties.

Red Counter Attacks
MOSCOW (AP)—The German siege lines around Leningrad have been pushed back from one to two miles by Red army counter attacks, and heavy Russian "smashes" on the front and in the center have inflicted more than 6,000 German casualties, official Russian reports said Friday.

Defenders of Russia's second largest city were said to have won new positions easing the German pressure by offensives which the Red army reported also established bridgeheads on the south bank of river "V."

A dispatch to Red Star, army newspaper, did not designate specific points retaken in the long battle for Leningrad but indicated that the attacks still were continuing.

Forces which crossed the river "V" it was said achieved their goal after a 10-day battle and earned the tanks of the northwest military command in a special order of the day.

Bobcats, Band to Board Bus for Texarkana

Hope Team to Leave at 6 o'Clock; Miss Henry Selected Drum Major

Leaving at 6:30 Friday night from the corner of Third and Main, the high school band of sixty-one members will go by bus to Texarkana for the Bobcat-Porker football game. The band will travel in two school buses accompanied by a truck for the instruments.

Twenty-five squadmen, coaches and student managers of the Hope High School football team will board a large bus at 6 o'clock Friday afternoon enroute to Texarkana for a game with the Razorbacks.

It will be the first time in 6 years that the two teams have met, having severed relations in 1935.

The Texarkana team, like the Bobcats, will be seeking its first win. The Razorbacks have lost one and tied the while Hope has lost three straight in as many tries.

Both teams are reported to be in good shape with Texarkana perhaps having the edge in weight and experience. However, Hope fans will recall that anything can happen when we two teams meet.

Both coaches, Hammons and Brasher, declined to comment on the outcome of the game as they knew little about Texarkana. "Both teams the Razorbacks played are plenty strong," however, you won't find three teams much stronger than Haynesville, La., Smackover and El Dorado," the coaches said.

The game starts promptly at 8 o'clock.

The Hope high school band will defend the game in a group, leaving Hope at 6:30. Many local fans plan to attend also.

Miss Dorothy Lane Henry, a senior, has been chosen for the second success.

Rotary Is Given English Report

President Davis' Trip Described by E. F. McFaddin

Hope Rotary club heard a description of war-time conditions in England Friday at the club's noon lunch at Hotel Barlow.

E. F. McFaddin, introduced on a program arranged by Royce Smith, told the club he had just returned from a Rotary international committee meeting in Chicago, at which International President Tom Davis reported on his recent visit to England.

Davis told the Hope Rotarian the effects of the German air raids were indescribable in the City of London where there was nothing but broken stone. Birmingham, British industrial city, displayed blocks and blocks of debris; the City of Coventry was utterly destroyed, and Edinburgh, Scotland, was badly damaged. Davis reported he saw the London Times printed in underground quarters.

Mr. McFaddin concluded, however, with Davis' statement that the courage of the English people was undiminished, and today they are supremely confident of ultimate victory.

Guests of the club Friday were E. F. Swearingen, Nashville, and Jack Lowe, Hope.

The seamen say. For though some of those first quickly fired torpedoes missed, many did not, and soon there was the unforgettable scene of blazing ships, burning water, vessels eddying lowly at the stern and seamen paddling helplessly around in the death-cold waters which lie outside Biscay along the northernmost coast of Portugal.

For six hours and more this first attack continued with gun crews aboard the still moving freighters trying their best to pour shells into the low-lying, deadly hulls of those underwater boats which dotted the water up and down the long line. Destroyers and corvettes' fire finally did the job and then, with the suddenness with which it began, the attack stopped. Quiet reigned—except for the shouts of men in the water and his hiss of escaping steam suddenly striking cold salt and the staccato boom of depth charges exploding in the distance.

The U-Boats Return

The formation drew closer that next day. Survivors, most of them, had been picked up by the tail-end boat. And as the bedraggled convoy sped slowly forward trying to put distance behind, preparations were made to repel another attack. Catalina flying boats hovered overhead almost constantly.

Then it came. After nightfall, as before.

The destroyers knew U-boats were approaching by their astic locators and went into action immediately. They might have got some on the approach but they, like the planes overhead, were hampered by the boats they guarded. They had no freedom of movement after the German ships came up inside the convoy. And similarly, the Catalinas above could drop no bombs because at night the phosphorescent wake of a slow-moving freighter looks little different from the churning froth of a stalking U-boat.

So it was with shell fire that they fought. From nightfall to nearly dawn the fight went on. When the U-boats ran out of torpedoes they, too, emerging completely and, keeping pace with the freighters, returned volley for Shattered U-boats, staggering from the direct hit of well-aimed shells, plunged to the bottom and then, with U-boats and ships of the convoy reeling from the battering which both were receiving, the sea battle suddenly terminated with the remaining ships of the convoy limping into Lisbon and the U-boat brigade disappearing in the direction of Griz Nez.

SANDY'S SACRIFICE

CHAPTER XXIII

THE world had not been a completely terrible place as long as Sandy was there. Not so frightening. Not so lonely. True, she had refused to see him, had banged doors in his face.

* Yet all of the time she had known that he was within call, or that he would return. He had caused all this trouble because he loved her and had believed she loved him.

Now he was gone. . . .

She would take the door in her heart marked Sandy and lock it forever. She would throw the key high, through the upper windows that fringed the cells, and maybe a stranger would pick it up, or kick it into the sewer. She never would know, she never would care.

She had hoped that Sandy would stand watch, then she remembered that he had contributed to her criminal record. Quite probably he had gone off to Peg.

New papers were brought in and she studied pictures, read stories, and cried a little. It was foolish to cry for someone whom you didn't want, and who didn't want you. Funny to be crying for two people. She grinned a little, remembering that she was saying goodbye to Philip, too.

She wiped her eyes and leafed through the newspapers again. Calico dresses were selling for $1.50. That was nice. Hers was bordered in rick-rack. Hers probably came to $1.75. She should feel well dressed.

SHE turned another page. Ah, there was a picture of Sandy with his ship. There was a brief story, reviewing his records. One fact alone stood out from the story—Sandy Ammerman had withdrawn from the cross-country competition. His entrance fee had been refunded.

The fee was $1000, Judy realized. What a silly thing to do. He might have won $10,000 in the cross-country flight. Then he could work harder on his parachute. He was a reckless, unreasonable fool and she might as well turn him in since nobody else would.

That was something she couldn't do, she discovered. The courts, one and all, wouldn't listen to her because she was under local jurisdiction. Had she been turned over to the aviation commissioners immediately, she could have been released and a search warrant issued for Sandy.

For a trembling moment, half ecstatic, half fearful, she wondered if the gay young aviator intended to use the money for her bail. What if he had thought of this? Maybe Peg had told him her family would pay the bond and save a pride that already was page one stuff everywhere.

THE courthouse clock across the street gave four long gongs. From the upper window Judy could see three marble angels upholding the clock. Nearby, church chimes sounded a medley of hymns.

"Long distance call for you, Miss Allen," a turnkey said. She stepped from the unlocked cell and went to the booth reserved for prisoners who had friends who kept up the relationship.

"New York City calling," the silvery voice of a distant operator answered Judy's hesitant "Hello." "Is this Judy Allen?"

"Yes, I'm Judy Allen."

"Judy darling!—A woman's voice enthused.

"Oh, Miss Barnard! Then you've been reading the papers, too?" She tried for lightness that did not come. "Am I fired?"

"Fired? You better knock that idea into a cocked hat. You're promoted! To one of the two associate editors. We need a column on courage for girls and you're the one to do it. Features are on your schedule, but no collecting hats and gloves. . . ."

"Miss Barnard, you're peaches and cream and caviar, but I'm doomed here. My family won't bail me out and won't appear before the court tomorrow. I'm stuck here for 50 years."

"Don't worry. They'll come across or I will. Judy, I've always wanted to go to jail, but crashing a traffic light is my worst offense. Report in as soon as you can, the lovely, lilted voice that was so crisp and capable and oh, "You've put under Twenty in every paper in the country. I love the publicity as much as dear, dear Philip hates it."

FOR the first time in two days Judy laughed happily. "You mean you've seen him? He was at your office?"

"Proud and angry and a perfect frump. Judy, how did you ever come so close to joining him at the altar?"

Judy's voice was filled with laughter as she answered. "I haven't any idea. I think Sara will console him and they'll make each other happy now."

Why she answered thus, Judy did not know.

"The reason he played you, my child, was because he liked you, liked you very much, but I knew her aunt's money lent weight to Sara's campaign. Sara liked his profile and neckties, too. Anyway, Sara was a sieve and a Pharisee and now she is placed where we can watch her."

"Sara didn't care about injuring others. Just me," Judy answered, her voice growing bitter. "Judy honey, Sara didn't want your by-lyte—oh, yes, I saw those delayed proof sheets, but it was too late to do anything about it, so I kept still—Sara wanted your man. You're safe."

JUDY felt better as she returned to the tall, narrow cage that had been her home for so many days.

It was good to know that her contact with the outside world had been re-established. Good to know that her magazine wanted her. For a fleeting moment she thought of Sandy. It was so unlike him to let her down.

Maybe he was asking the Gordons to help him so he could increase his $1000 and help her. Yes, that was it—only she would never accept help from any of them. Sandy could take that rushing cross-country flight.

She went to sleep and did not waken until the matron summoned her for the opening of court. For a moment she remembered Sandy, tried to hate him, wondered why she couldn't, then followed the matron.

He was killed a short time ago in the performance of his duty, and to his funeral came many of those who had known him on his beat in Harlem, many also who knew him long ago, and who attended the funeral in the feathered head-dress of the Sioux tribesmen.

At the funeral they read a letter. Schowers, or many rains, had written it three years ago and stipulated that he wanted it read at his funeral. It began:

"It is with deepest regret that I leave behind the department that I loved since I was a little boy. But I also leave you with a joy no one will ever know, and that is being a member of the finest police department in the world."

Chief Many Rains was 40 years old when he was killed. How was the little Indian boy drawn to the New York police department? Somehow he must have seen a reflection in pictures, or in personal contact with that fine body of men, of the virtues his own fathers had taught the young tribesmen.

So he wanted to be a policeman, and nothing would do but to be a member of the finest police department in the world. He made it, and he passed his life thus. And when he died they read at his funeral his letter. It closed:

"I have been looking forward to the day when I could go on to the Happy Hunting Grounds of my ancestors, to live in peace always."

There were tears in the faces of the tribesmen at the funeral, and tears also in the faces of the men and women of Harlem who had known Patrolman Schowers.

Shall anyone say this was not a successful life? Shall America not be proud of a true native son who knew how to live and how to die?

Flynn, MacMurray Star in 'Dive Bombers' at Saenger Sunday

Thrilling Air Adventure to Play Three Days

Much of Exterior Work Done at the San Diego Naval Base

Warner Bros. "Dive Bombers," opening Sunday at the Saenger is for many reasons, Hollywood's "biggest" new production; "big" not only in importance of star names, budget, schedules and story, but vast in the technical problems it presented.

First of all, it deals with a completely new subject, the work of specialists of which there are more and more in the country today. These are the flight surgeons, medical scientists out to solve the mysteries of the stratosphere.

For planes and plane motors have been advanced so far by men that man himself is not physically or mentally equipped to keep up with them. Therefore the dread "black out" of dive bomber pilots, altitude sickness, pilot fatigue and other bewildering ailments, all serious, that have been revealed only since planes were made powerful enough to take man 20,000, 40,000 and 50,000 feet into the air.

In "Dive Bombers," filmed in new fast-action Technicolor, Errol Flynn and Fred MacMurray are starred, supported by Regis Toomey, Ralph Bellamy, Allen Jenkins, and others, with beautiful young Alexis Smith as the leading woman. Michael Curtiz directed, from a story by Frank Wead and a screen play by Wead and Robert Buckner.

Much of the exterior work on the picture was done at the U. S. Naval Air Base, San Diego, where every facility, every plane, was made available to the Warner Bros. company. Other work there was done aboard the U. S. S. Enterprise, an aircraft carrier.

Most difficult production problems was to get actual scientific equipment, all practical, such as that in use at the Wright Field Flight Surgeon Laboratories, Dayton, Ohio, where most such work in the country is done today. Some of this equipment was obtained on loan from Wright Field officials.

The rest of it, such as a huge low pressure chamber, electroencephalographs, electrocardiographs, depth perception devices, oximeters, etc., had to be built right in studio shops. And all of it had to work. Four naval technical directors were on the job to see that things are right: Commander J. R. Poppen, one of the highest ranking naval flight surgeons, with 19 years' experience in that field; Lt. Commanders Seth Warner and Charles Brown, and Lieut. Ray C. Needham of the Saratoga.

More than two months was required for camera work alone, so many were the flight and other technical problems involved.

According to U. S. Public Health Service, more than 10,000 accidental deaths occur annually in public places accounting for 4 per cent of all deaths and 50 per cent of all accidental deaths in the country.

Timeless Saga at the Rialto

'Adam Had Four Sons' Opens at Rialto Sunday

Timeless saga of a family's fight to survive, tense drama of the ages war of women for the men they love, Columbia's "Adam Had Four Sons" opens Sunday at the Rialto Theater.

Reveal one of the most amazingly candid stories ever brought to the screen, the heart-warming story of five fascinating men and the women in their lives.

Featured in the memorable new film are Susan Hayward, Fay Wray, Helen Westley, Richard Denning, Johnny Downs and Robert Shaw. Gregory Ratoff directed the scenes of unforgettable romance of struggle and of victory which has made "Adam Had Four Sons" one of the most talked-of motion pictures of the year.

Baxter is seen as Adam Stoddard, proud father of four devil-may-care boys. He watches them grow, helps them through their loves and wars and amazing destinies, sees a smoldering-eyed girl capture first one, then another of his sons, sees her seek greedily for new victims, finally to reach after him as well. Miss Bergman, the brilliant star of "Intemperance," is cast in "Adam Had Four Sons" as Emile, fiercely devoted to Adam and his youngsters, hauntingly lovely, gallantly loyal, understanding and courageous.

As Hester, the modern Scarlett O'Hara, lovely Susan Hayward is said to give the most powerful performance of her young career, a performance destined to zoom her well on the way to stardom. Miss Wray is effectively cast as Adam Stoddard's young wife, whose death precipitates the drama and the disaster which face the Stoddards for years.

Lesser players are equally noteworthy, according to advance report, with Richard Denning, Johnny Downs and Robert Shaw capturing honors as three of the four sons. Advance praise has also been accorded Ratoff for his sensitive direction of this memorable drama of the human heart this saga of the Stoddard family with its feuds and passions, loves and conquests.

Man's Failure to Act as Son of God Stands as World's Greatest Tragedy
Text: Genesis 1:26-28; Matthew 6:24-33.

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

The foundation of a great religion was laid when man dared to conceive of himself as made in the image and likeness of the God who made him. Here was spiritual insight, clear, true, and sound, the full significance of which we can appreciate when in contrast we see the type of religion that had man cowering before the forces of nature, or bowing down to grotesque idols.

The writer of Genesis saw man in God's image, with dominion over lesser creatures and with dominion over his world. It is this view of man that is amply demonstrated throughout the centuries of human history. Man, like God the Creator, is himself a creator.

He has bridged great rivers and oceans; he has ascended high mountains and delved far into the depths of the earth. We see man, in spite of the short span of human life and from the words of Jesus. The quality of human life, Jesus says, depends upon choice, and there are that are utterly at variance.

No man can serve two masters. This was the distinctive message of Jesus—that true life and true religion were based upon commanding will and decision, by which a man gave himself and all that he had wholeheartedly and unreservedly to the side of right and love and truth. Anything less than this means crucial the limitations of human weakness, as exercising dominion.

On the other side of the picture, we see man with his great capacity and high estate, spurning his nobility and power to act more like a devil than like the good God who made him, and even perverting his great powers and capacities at their highest to evil and destructive ends.

It is man in these two capacities or characters, and man with the power of choice, that is set before us in the second portion of our lesson

Mission to Take Up Religion

Harriman to Discuss Religious Freedom With Russia

WASHINGTON—(AP)—President Roosevelt disclosed Friday that he instructed W. Averill Harriman, head of the American mission to Russia, to take up in Moscow the question of religious freedom in Russia.

The chief executive told his press conference that the question also had been taken up previously with the Russian government leaving the impression that this had been one through Lawrence Steinhardt, the U. S. ambassador.

He said he had received no report from Harriman and could not say until he did get one whether he thought the overtures would result in some success.

Hitler's secret weapon has been the cold deck.

shortcoming and weakness. If lives fail to measure up to this standard, it is to the loss of those lives. The standard of Christian living is always commanding and exacting.

God who created man is on the side of man to help and strengthen him. Man who has consecrated his life to God may live a life of faith above fear and anxiety. To seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness is to establish all of life up on a sound and unshakable foundation.

It is the tragedy of our times that God-like man should choose to make himself so devil-like, ruining and destroying where the whole purpose of God and of man at his best is to create and build.

Can we restore to man the vision of himself as the privileged child of God? The Bible is a great revelation of what man and human society could be, if men fulfilled the character and destiny for which God made them.
